Representative Amanda Stuck Holds In-District Inauguration

APPLETON – Following last Monday’s formal inauguration ceremony in Madison, last night, State Representative Amanda Stuck (D-Appleton) held an in-district swearing-in ceremony at the Outagamie County Administrative Building, surrounded by family, friends, supporters and local elected officials. Supreme Court Justice Ann Walsh Bradley presided over the event and administered the Oath of Office.

“It was a great honor to participate in the formal Inauguration Day celebrations in Madison, but it is more important to me to stand with my constituents in the Fox Cities,” said Rep. Stuck. “As a State Legislator, I won’t forget about where I come from, about those who’ve raised me and about the community that I now have the privilege to represent in the State Assembly”

The 57th Assembly District includes the southern half of the City of Appleton in Outagamie and Winnebago Counties, the City of Menasha in Winnebago County and the eastern half of the Town of Menasha.

At Thursday night’s event, Stuck noted that as she went door-to-door over the last year, citizens in the 57th Assembly District were concerned about job creation, worker training, education and partisanship in Madison.”

“My top priority as a State Representative is to work to create jobs, grow our economy, and to make sure that we have a skilled and educated workforce. This means working with educators, business owners, and legislators on both sides of the aisle to help get Wisconsin’s economy back on track,” stated Rep. Stuck. “I am looking forward to working with my Fox Valley colleagues in the Legislature to put forward and support policies that are good for the Fox Cities and that will move the State of Wisconsin forward.”

Stuck was elected to the Assembly in November of 2014. She will serve on the Assembly Committees on Energy and Utilities, Environment and Forestry, Housing and Real Estate, and Jobs and the Economy during the 2015-2016 Legislative Session.
